We all have areas of fitness that we need to work on. See Pages two and three for information and resources to increase your overall health and resiliency.
Embrace Discomfort
Physically resilient Marines embrace discomfort, knowing it leads to greater endurance, performance, awareness of one's current limits, and ability to train and challenge those current limits. Includes balanced physical training planning, as well as nutrition and injury prevention.

Physical Fitness
Having the strength, endurance, coordination, and reserve capacity necessary for success in any environment. Possessing the knowledge, skills, attitudes, and resources necessary to obtain, sustain, and regain optimum personal physical performance.

“Marines develop strong mental, moral, spiritual, and ethical understanding because they are as important as physical skills when operating in the violence of combat. - MCDP-7

Mental Fitness
Remaining engaged in psychologically healthy thinking and behaviors. Includes one’s mindset, attitudes, and practices that help them deal with various stressors that impede overall performance. Able to acknowledge stress, seek help early, eliminate stigma around seeking help, help other Marines/Sailors, have strong relationships and friendships, have healthy family relationships, balance family and work requirements, and understand the principles of Combat Operational Stress Control (COSC).

Embrace Learning
Mentally resilient Marines embrace life-long learning knowing it leads to faster decision-making under stress, a strong mindset, and the ability to solve complex problems. Includes professional and personal development.

Development of the moral compass is required on and off today's complex battlefield. Marine Corps Core Values/Leadership Traits and Principles and tie-ins assist in developing the Ethical Warrior. - MCO 1500.59A
Giving and receiving support in positive relationships with peers, families, and communities. Maintaining strong relationships and friendships, having healthy family relationships, being kind and respectful to others, and seeking and enjoying companionship.

Integrity. Uprightness of character and soundness of moral principles. Integrity includes the qualities of truthfulness and honesty. – MCRP 611D

Social Fitness

Giving and receiving support in positive relationships with peers, families, and communities. Maintaining strong relationships and friendships, having healthy family relationships, being kind and respectful to others, and seeking and enjoying companionship.

Embrace Trust

Socially resilient Marines embrace trust in others, knowing we are stronger collectively than separate. Marines embrace trust, but they also embrace the challenge of proving themselves trustworthy to their fellow Marines by practicing accountability, follow-

Resiliency

Resiliency is an important aspect of a Marine’s personal and professional life. It ensures that when faced with the challenges in and out of combat, Marines will be able to meet those challenges, drawing from internal and external sources of strength and support. Marines with a high degree of physical and cognitive performance build and maintain resiliency in the four areas of fitness: Physical, Mental, Social, and Spiritual.
